Can Someone Ban Bitu79?

Site Feedback

Faheem_Anis1 1 July 31, 2026, 5:08am

I would like to report a user who has been posting similar threads on the Google AI Developer Forums for over a month.

The user's posts originally focused on legal concerns regarding Google's data retention practices after account or data deletion. I do not wish to comment on, support, or dispute the legal merits of those claims, as this forum is not the appropriate place to resolve such matters.

However, the user has continued posting repetitive threads on the same topic, adopted an offensive profile picture, and has repeatedly made accusations toward other community members and moderators. Regardless of whether their underlying concerns are valid, the manner and frequency of these posts appear to be disruptive and are, in my view, no longer conducive to constructive discussion within this community.

I respectfully ask the moderation team to review this user's activity and determine whether it violates the forum's community guidelines. If appropriate, I request that they consider restricting or suspending the account to help keep discussions on-topic and maintain a welcoming environment for other participants.

Anyone who reads through the full discussions across my various posts — including the comments, screenshots, timestamps, and reactions — will clearly see that many users here are behaving inconsistently, erratically, and are not responding to the actual facts. Instead, they encourage each other and engage in personal attacks against me. This happens because they blindly believe in Google's innocence.

Since they cannot refute the technical and legal realities I have presented, they attack my communication. But there is nothing wrong with my communication — the problem is that the users are unable to follow the content.

I demand an official response from Google within this forum, because the situation has become untenable. A small-scale civil war and witch hunt has formed around me on this platform, and Google will face the consequences of this in the upcoming legal proceedings, since this is their forum and they intentionally refuse to respond to any of my posts. Instead, they allow the situation to escalate. It is not enough that they ignore the data-protection issues — now my person has become a public target on their own platform.

Here are a few quotes:

R Google is stealing data, and the developers here are assisting them with it. he... You're a bot. Bad bot.

The case is moving forward.

NOYB (Max Schrems' data-protection organization) has already reached out to me from their official legal requests address.

This means Google should start sweating, because they've seen the evidence and they're looking into it.

And regardless of how this develops, I'm launching the lawsuit anyway - the evidence is 100% solid and fully reproducible in AI Studio.
